Multidimensional Theory

There are a lot of theologians now who are saying the basic Protestant Christian view of heaven being up and hell being down and earth being in the middle is actually a representation of multidimensionalism, where the spirit world would be a dimension that exists like a cloth laid over earth that is there but we cannot really interact with it because it is another dimension. The idea is that heaven and hell are dimensions - and quantum physicists have been saying for forty years now that there is more than just the three dimensions we see, and time is a fourth, and they are saying there are probably like six or seven. They are saying that there is another dimension that is around us, because the quantum theory is based on the idea that you have an atom and inside the atom the subatomic particles are spinning and revolving, but if you take this electron away from this atom and put it over here, it keeps doing the same thing it was doing over here no matter what you do to it. You can separate them by an infinite distance and they will continue to behave that way. So, the theory is that there is some connection there that we cannot see that links the two together, which is why matter cannot be destroyed.
