Teachers

A good teacher? One English teacher - I love him to death. He has long hair and stuff like that but he like makes learning fun in ways in which you never - you know. I feel a good way to teach is to have fun and activities in which it's more interesting. If you're just sitting in class just talking, obviously students are going to zone out. So, I feel you should like get them involved in it. Ask some questions even if they don't even know them. And be open to their opinions and stuff because my English class is built on opinions. What we read we might like - 'cause right now, we're doing Shakespeare. And like five people might read the same line and interpret it differently. And he may give his theory because he makes it seem so simple. And then, he like throws in an activity. Like, "Well, I want you guys to do a poem translating it into your own words. And then write an essay for what it means to you". And so, I mean then we'll stand up in the class. We may recite them. We may rap them. I mean - it's just fun! I mean but, just interact with the class. Class is just like a family. -Tedra Johnson
